ABOUT ME

Hello, I'm Udit from Delhi, currently pursuing B.Sc. and completing the Marketing Launchpad program at Kraftshala.

My background in competitive exam preparation taught me discipline, analytical thinking, and problem-solving, which I now apply to marketing. Through Kraftshala, I've gained hands-on experience in Meta Ads, Google Ads, Amazon Ads, SEO, and digital marketing strategy.

I've worked on live campaigns where my team achieved 48 conversions against a target of 50 on Meta Ads and exceeded Google Ads targets with 9 add-to-cart conversions against a goal of 7. These experiences helped me develop skills in campaign planning, audience targeting, optimization, and performance analysis.

I'm looking to start my career in performance marketing, where I can continue learning, drive measurable results, and contribute to business growth.

SEO Blog – "Inside Snitch's Marketing Strategy"

Identified Snitch as a fast-growing Indian D2C fashion brand with strong search demand around "Snitch marketing strategy" and "Snitch business model." Found a gap in marketer-focused content explaining how the brand scaled from a WhatsApp catalogue to a ₹2,500 crore valuation.

Research approach: Analyzed founder interviews, Shark Tank insights, media reports, Instagram content, app reviews, and customer discussions to uncover growth drivers across acquisition, retention, and omnichannel expansion.

Key insights: Snitch's competitive advantage comes from supply-chain speed, limited-inventory drops, influencer-led discovery, app-driven retention, and offline stores that strengthen trust and repeat purchases.

Execution: Developed a 2,000+ word case study centered on one core idea: Snitch's supply chain and marketing strategy work as a single growth engine. Structured the article around customer personas, channel analysis, business impact, competitive positioning, and strategic recommendations.

Projected impact: Targets high-intent keywords such as "Snitch marketing strategy," "Snitch business model," and "Indian D2C fashion brands," while attracting marketers, founders, MBA students, and recruiters evaluating strategic marketing capabilities.

SEO Blog – “Top 15 Black Coffee Benefits”

Identified strong search demand around keywords such as “black coffee benefits,” “benefits of drinking black coffee,” “black coffee for weight loss,” “black coffee calories,” and “is black coffee healthy.” Found an opportunity to create a comprehensive, SEO-focused guide that combines scientific evidence with practical consumer insights.

Research approach: Analyzed medical studies, nutrition databases, expert health resources, and coffee industry content to validate health claims around black coffee. Studied user intent across search results, FAQs, and competitor articles to identify the most searched benefits, misconceptions, and consumption concerns.

Validated key themes: Black coffee supports energy and alertness, may improve focus and cognitive performance, contains antioxidants, can aid weight-management goals, has minimal calories, and may contribute to long-term health when consumed in moderation. Also explored brewing methods, daily intake recommendations, and common questions about additives like ghee, milk, and sugar.

Execution: Developed a long-form SEO article structured around the Top 15 Black Coffee Benefits, supported by research-backed explanations, practical consumption advice, brewing insights, and FAQ sections. Built the narrative to balance scientific credibility with readability for everyday coffee drinkers.

- Continuous bid and keyword refinement improves efficiency, especially on limited budgets.

KRAFTSHALA REEL

This reel explores India's growth story through a pride-driven, educational lens — tracing how two visionary scientists, Dr. Homi Bhabha and Dr. Vikram Sarabhai, convinced a newly independent nation to dream beyond its borders. The core idea is that India's scientific ambition was not inherited — it was built from conviction, peer by peer, meeting by meeting.

The storytelling connects ISRO's founding journey with the larger narrative of national pride, showing how two scientists turned a political conversation into a space program that now defines India globally. By anchoring facts inside a human story — Sarabhai and Bhabha walking into Nehru's office — the reel makes history feel personal, urgent, and worth celebrating. From Chandrayaan discovering water on the Moon to Mangalyaan reaching Mars, the reel builds towards its punchline: ISRO doesn't stand for Indian Space Research Organization — it stands for Impossible Space Research Organization.

UNLEAVABLES REEL

This reel is built around the thought that in today's fast-paced life, people often overlook the small moments that bring genuine comfort and happiness. Using cozy morning visuals, quiet everyday routines, and warm emotional cues, the reel encourages viewers to slow down and appreciate the "little things" that actually feel meaningful.

The reel works because it feels soft, relatable, and emotionally calming. Instead of aggressively selling products, it creates an emotional atmosphere that viewers connect with, making the brand feel warm, human, and memorable.

Under Armour

- Positioning: Performance, athletic authority, elite mindset. The brand IS the athlete.
- Content Strategy: 40% athlete storytelling, 30% training reels, 20% product drops, 10% motivational content
- Why It Works: Aspirational yet attainable. Makes every gym-goer feel like a pro athlete. High save rate on training content.
- Gaps Identified: Too serious, zero fun. Ignores the casual fitness crowd. Feels American — doesn't localise for Gen Z India.
- Under Armour speaks to the elite. Nobody is speaking to the expressive everyday mover. That's our person.

HRX

- Positioning: Discipline, performance, fitness-first. Hrithik Roshan's personal brand IS the brand. Everything is intense, motivated, serious.
- Content Strategy: 30% fitness education, 25% product showcase, 20% micro/mid influencer collabs, 15% aspirational lifestyle, 10% sale/promo
- Why It Works: Educational content builds real credibility. Fitness tips get saved and shared. The brand has authority in the fitness-first segment.
- Gaps Identified: Zero humor. Zero casual fitness. Only talks to hardcore gym-goers. Low engagement (100–600 likes) despite solid content quality — people respect it but don't love it.

Bewakoof®

GYMSHARK

- Positioning: Fitness lifestyle brand. Community over product. You belong here.
- Content Strategy: 35% UGC & community reposts, 25% creator collabs, 20% training reels, 20% drop & launch hype
- Why It Works: Social proof engine. Community creates content, brand amplifies it. Authentic, not polished — which Gen Z trusts more.
- Gaps Identified: Premium pricing locks out India's mass market. Western aesthetic doesn't translate. No regional language or cultural hooks.
- Gymshark owns the fitness tribe. Nobody owns the hatke, expressive Indian who works out AND has a personality. That's our person.

INFINITO

- Positioning: Affordable versatility. Comfort meets style for everyday active living.
- Content Strategy: 40% styling carousels, 25% micro-influencer reviews, 20% product education, 15% lifestyle content
- Why It Works: Carousel format drives saves & shares. Micro-influencers build niche trust at low cost. Versatility messaging removes the "only for gym" barrier.
- Gaps Identified: Low brand recall — too quiet, no distinct voice. Content blends into the feed. No cultural identity or movement behind the brand.

LAUNCH TIMELINE

Bewakoof®

PRE-LAUNCH (29–31 March)

Role of Content:

Make the audience feel personally called out - before they've seen a single product. Don't tease the collection. Tease the person it's made for. By 31st March night, they shouldn't be curious about the clothes. They should feel like this brand was built for them.

POST-LAUNCH (2–5 April)

Role of Content:

Turn emotional investment into action - and action into community. Validate buyers, show the product in real life, pull fence-sitters in through social proof. The job shifts from "making people feel seen" to "making people feel they'd be missing something that's genuinely theirs."

Strategic Logic

Pre-launch goal:

Make the audience feel seen before seeing the product — by 31 March, they shouldn't be curious about the clothes, they should feel the brand was built for them

Post-launch goal:

Turn emotional investment into action — validate buyers, show real-life product use, pull fence-sitters in through social proof
